No.1

What are two characteristics of a consumption-based model? Each correct answer presents a complete solution.

- A. high captial expenditures
- B. no upfront costs
- C. requires the purchase of and management of the physical infrastructure
- D. the ability to stop paying for resources that are no longer used

答案

BD

In a consumption-based model, you do not pay for anything until you start using resources, and you only pay for what you use. If you stop using a resource, you stop paying for it. High expenditures are usually associated with the purchase of the physical infrastructure, which is not needed in a consumption-based model.
